Andre Norman: Ambassador Of Hope

From illiteracy to gang activity, Andre's childhood prepared him for nothing less than a life of crime and violence. This behavior eventually led Andre to be sentenced to over 100 years in prison. A natural-born leader, he quickly rose to the top of the prison gang where he managed gang activities from within the confines of a maximum security prison. Winning his appeal and armed with a GED and a dream, Andre walked out of prison in 1999, having served 14 years. Having been exposed to both sides of the fence, Andre pulled from his life experiences and created 180x, a program designed to teach individuals and corporations how to turn any situation around. Having survived rock bottom, Andre knew he could help others do the same. He has lectured at Harvard University and has been a featured speaker at MIT's Department of Urban Studies and Planning.
